

“Is that you?” is an interactive audiovisual installation taking place in a dark room with low hidden lights. On the wall there is a mirror and in front of the mirror a stool. In that stool, there is an automated system connected with two speakers placed behind the viewer, one in the right corner and the other in the left corner. This system works with a piezo sensor and gives the sign to the speakers when the viewer sits on the chair. The room has a blackout curtain and next to it follows the next text:

Have you ever looked at yourself in the mirror? What have you told him/her? What did he/she respond back? What did you see? Did you recognize him/her, or was it someone else?

Inside the room, only yourself is waiting for you. You have 7 minutes to meet your look. Seize the opportunity. Close the curtain. Make yourself comfortable on the pillow. Concentrate on your image and meet your gaze.

The time and the room are yours!
